

INTERNATIONAL CENTER RELOCATION

The International Center has served as the nexus of international community at UC San Diego for over 45 years. The Center currently serves a core clientele of 7,280 international students, 2,739 visiting international faculty and scholars, and over 7,000 domestic students seeking study abroad opportunities. In addition, the Center also serves 500 student and scholar dependents.

During the summer of 2016, the units housed within the International Center and the adjacent annex building, Student Center B (International Center West) were relocated to transitional locations on campus. This action was in preparation for the demolition of the existing Center buildings. The Friends of the International Center and the Oceanids, both official Campus Support Groups serving the Center's populations, will migrate their programs to several temporary locations as well. These moves temporarily impacted the continuity of service and support to campus constituencies; however, staff and volunteers were committed to serving Center constituents during this transition.

At this time, the major relocations include:

- Friends of the International Center – The Great Hall in ERC, U409 Dance Hall, Building 214, and other existing campus spaces will serve to host many existing programs. Link

The reimagining of a new nexus of international community for the campus is underway, one that will retain the historic and unique aspects of the original center and, at the same time, provide forward-thinking innovations that will serve the campus far into the future.

International Center staff will update constituents via email and their department websites.

During this transition of the International Center we are fortunate to have established an agreement with I-House in ERC to host the Friday International Café in the Great Hall as well as several other events that support the international community at UC San Diego.
